TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 5, 1858. THE LATE FATAL DUEL IN FRANCE.

What is termed the "society" of Paris has been extremely impressed within these few days by an event that is luckily not of frequent occurrence in the civilization of modern France; by a duel, the cause whereof was as fatile as its issue has been fat al. A young Neapolitan of very high family, Count Cataneo, an only son, not yet five and twenty, handsome and distinguished in every way, but alas! too easily led into the various centres of dissipation that abound in this town, was in the habit, since his arrival here, of attending the dancing lessons of the famous Cellarius. At the same lesson were several young Frenchmen, among others, M. de -, a cavalry officer. It is the practice at the course de dance in question to invite as partners for the students a certain number of ladies of a more or less equivocal character, often chosen from the inferior ranks of the ballet corps of the opera. One of these nymphs had thought proper to detach a flower from her bouquet and place it in the but-tonhole of M. de F----, but half an hour after she changed her mind, and taking back the flower transferrred it to Count Catanen. A quadrille was formed and ill luck decrees that the two young men are place! opposite each other. The Neapolitan, with the vehemence of gesticulation of his countrymen, el ances to run against the cavalry officer, who replies by a somewhat violent expression; and from this slight and unworthy cause

Seconds were chosen, the spot, and the hour named, and pistols demanded by the Italian as the arms. The seconds of M. de F- refused, from the conviction that with swords the affair would be more easily arranged, and could be put an end to at the first wound. The swords brought were Italian ones belonging to Count Cataneo's semuch longer than the sword used in France, its guard is differently placed, and the management of it requires an altogether different unguardedly forward, and was literally run through from chest to back bone. There is TRUNKS, of every kind, fine SOLE LEATH-I do not remember any occurrence that, for long years past, has produced the universal DLES, BRIDLES, MARTINGALES, WHIPS, and for sale by HENRY COOK & CO... sensation that has been made by this catas- &c., as fine as the finest; Buffalo and fancy trophe. The illusions are so complete that everybody appears to be baffled in their endeavors to discover the secret. With the exception of two or three chairs the stage is perfectly bare, and yet, in the absence of any visible means of accomplishing them, Professor Frikell performs feats that are perfectly marvellous. For example, he last night borrowed a hat from a gentleman in the pit, from which in the first place he extracted a wig. He then drew out in succession 50 silver goblets, then the same number of eggs, and afterwards a second edition | ed via Antwerp and New York, from the great of silver goblets. The hat was then placed on the ground and blown to pieces, in which on the ground and blown to pieces, in which condition it was politely offered to its owner, who, however, did not relish the idea of taking it back in that condition. In this dilemma the professor placed the fragments in a brown paper parcel, and gave it to one of the audience to hold tightly. A pistol was then produced and fired at the parcel in question, the borrowed hat flew up to the ceiling, and the parcel, when opened, was found | do.; 3 boxes Lemons. to contain a large doll. The bat was finally summoned from its lofty elevation, and restored to the owner. Such is a specimen of Professor Frikell's powers .- London Letter. NO GLOOM AT HOME. Above all things there should be no gloom in the house. The shadows of dark discontent and wasting fretfulness should never black shapes, like funeral palls, over the LIVERY STABLE recently erected by the subhappy young spirits there.
